Empowering Change at the International Conference on Educating for Sustainability Action

Centre for Environment Education (CEE) is organizing an International Conference on “Educating for Sustainability Action” to be held from 9 to 11 January 2025 in Ahmedabad, India.

The conference will convene scholars, practitioners, educators, and young leaders to collaborate and discuss on addressing the triple planetary crises across all sectors, including communities, policymakers, educators, governments, and businesses. The 2025–2030 period is a pivotal time for advancing the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), offering a critical opportunity to leverage education as a catalyst for sustainability action. This phase emphasizes the importance of innovative teaching methods, resource optimization, and the development of strategic educational initiatives.

CEE along with SASEANEE also invited researchers, educators, and academics to submit their papers for this conference on the theme “Greening Education: Addressing the Triple Planetary Crises”.

CONFERENCES

Organisation: CEE

Topic: Educating for Sustainability Action

Conference Dates: 9-11 January, 2025

Mode: Offline

Venue: Ahmedabad, India

Description: Dealing with the triple planetary crises requires urgent action at various levels – by communities, decision-makers, educators, government, and businesses. The years 2025 to 2030 are crucial for SDG progress in achieving the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. This period presents an opportunity to fully harness the power of education for sustainability action, especially to highlight pedagogy and resources and identify the need to develop strategic education interventions. The international conference 'Educating for Sustainability Action' is a crucial platform in this regard.

CERTIFICATIONS

Organisation: IUCN Academy

Name: Measuring and Monitoring Urban Nature

Course Dates: 19 January, 2025 - 2 April, 2025

Mode: Online

Description: Cities are struggling to track their environmental impact. The current monitoring methods are a mixed bag, using different approaches that make it impossible to compare data across cities. To tackle this, IUCN has developed a standardized system called the Urban Nature Index (UNI) that provides a clear picture of a city's ecological performance. Flexible for various users, the UNI aims to streamline data collection and reveal the true impact cities have on our planet. With biodiversity loss accelerating and cities holding immense power to influence the crisis, measurable action towards global environmental goals is more important than ever.

Link: <https://iucn.org/events/coursetraining/professional-certificate-finance-nature-13-january-2025>

Organisation: IUCN Academy

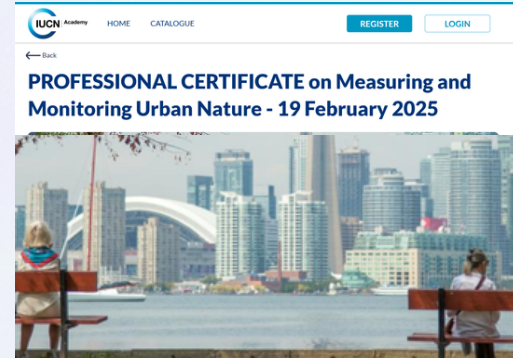

Name: PROFESSIONAL CERTIFICATE on Measuring and Monitoring Urban Nature

Course Dates: 19 February 2025 - 02 April 2025

Mode: self-paced e-learning and online live sessions with sustainability experts

Description: As urban areas expand, cities face increasing challenges in tracking and managing their environmental impacts. The existing monitoring methods are inconsistent, resulting in fragmented data that hinders the global understanding of a city's environmental performance. In response, IUCN has developed the Urban Nature Index (UNI), a standardised system that offers a comprehensive view of a city's impact on nature. To develop the UNI, technical support was provided by a team of consultants at Urban Biodiversity Hub, some 30 experts drawn from IUCN Members and Commissions, and representatives of 26 local governments.
